LEGG SAYS WASHINGTON FILL IS OKAY

231 Nevada St., Oct. 25, 1947

Mr. Harley Leete, Jr.

Dear Harley:

Some one blundered (in my estimation) when the Washington Street fill is mentioned in a critical way. I knew that ravine when a girl named Mabel Bradley would walk on the rail of the foot bridge on her way to school. The elderly feminine populat'on threw up their hands in horror.

Much of the yardage used on this project, I think, has been obtained from time to time at little or no cost, making it appear like patch work.

A thorough investigat'on and apology might be in order.

PATCHING WITH PLATINUM NO. 2

On Friday the Nugget printed an editorial on that notable boondoggle, the Washington Street fill.

Here's what Superintendent of Streets Herbert S. Hallett had to say in rejoinder: (1) Practically all of the work on that project has been done by the state, the money coming out of the state gasoline tax; (2) the state has maintained it for 15 years; (3) the city has spent less than $100 there in the last 15 years; (4) during the depression work was done on the roadway there by the Works Progress Administration; (5) thousands of dollars worth of expense was saved the city by using earth from the grammar school excavation, rather than buying; (6) the great proportion of work done by city crews on the fill has been paid for out of city funds.

Here's what the Nugget has to say: We were wrong in supposing that it was a city project.

HOWEVER, the state's money doesn't come from Heaven—it comes from exactly the same place the city's money comes from—THE TAXPAYER. And the Washington street fill has still been one amazing boondoggle—patch, patch, patch throughout the years. How long is this patching with platinum going to go on? When are we going to start doing things right the first time?—H. M. L., Jr.

THE - Diary of a 49'er

FROM THE BOOK EDITED BY C. L. CANFIELD

DECEMBER 21, 1851.—It has rained more or less all the week and the water is so high in the creek that there is no chance to get our sluice boxes in place. Our neighbor at the next cabin, "Silent Platt," as we call him, stuck a pick in his foot and has been laid up for a few days. He's a queer stick in some ways, rarely goes to town or anywhere else except to his claim, and does but little talking; doesn't seem to be interested in anything. That's why we call him "Silent Platt." We were surprised Thursday when he came up to our cabin and spent the day and evening with us, and then we found out why he had become almost a hermit. We made him feel at home and then he told his story. It seems that he was foreman in a clock factory in New York, making a pretty good living, but not getting ahead very much, so when the California fever broke out he and his chum, who worked in the same shop, made up their minds to seek their fortune together. He was married and had one baby, a little four-year-old girl, and he fixed it for his wife and child to live with his wife's mother on a farm she owned near Hartford, Connecticut. He had saved about five hundred dollars and it took about all of this to outfit himself for the trip. He joined a company of fifty adventurers that was formed in New York City, and instead of coming around the "Horn," as most of these associations did, the members planned to go to Texas and then overland until they reached California. They chartered a bark to take them to Galveston and there outfitted for the journey. Each member of the party bought two mules, one to ride and one to pack, together with grub and cooking utensils, and were even foolish enough to pack along picks and shovels and other useless truck, which, however, soon became burdensome and were thrown away. A captain and other officers were selected, and it was agreed that they would all stand together until they reached Southern California. They knew nothing about the country between Texas and California, except by vague report, as there was no road and no white man had ever traveled it, with the exception of a company of United States Dragoons, which had gone through in 1846. They heard stories of long deserts, heat and hostile Indians, but they were all young and adventurous and had gone too far to turn back. They got along all right until they had journeyed through the north of Western Texas, and then their hardships began. From what Platt related, it seems that from there on until they reached this state the whole territory is nothing but a vast, hot, arid region with only here and there a patch of grass and a dried up river bed. They had to make long marches under a burning sun to reach water and forage and, when found, lay for a week to recruit their animals. They were ambushed twice by Indians, nine of the party were killed and two died from the effects of heat and too much mescal that was procured at various Mexican villages. At these places they managed to buy a small stock of corn and beans and finally fell in with the Pima tribe of Indians on the Gila River, who were more than friendly and did all that was possible to help and succor the party. After staying with the tribe for ten days they pushed on for the Colorado River, two Indians going along as guides. Here they had to build rafts to cross and swim the mules, and one of the party was drowned in crossing. The next one hundred and fifty miles were the worst of the journey. They were forced to travel nights, as the sun was too hot in the day time, and they found water in but two places. On the morning of the second day Platt lost his partner. They had not had a drop to drink for twenty-four hours, but were expecting to find a sink hole which the Indians had told them about, when his partner jumped off his mule and started to run into the desert. He had gone clean crazy. He ran about a mile when he fell and died in a fit. The best they could do was to cover him with a little sand and leave him in his lonely grave. Platt said that long before they saw any indication of water the mules, which had been barely crawling along, pricked up their ears and broke into a lope, and, sure enough, around the turn of a spur of the hills they came to a perfect little oasis, about half an acre of green grass and willow trees and a pool of fresh spring water, fifty feet across and four feet deep. The mules were frantic and rushed into it with their packs and saddles on, drank their fill and then laid down and rolled over and over. They had but little grub left, but they stayed there two days, in order to strengthen up the animals, as this was the first good feed they had had since leaving the Gila River. Here they turned off into the San Jacinto mountains and rode seventy miles to Warner's place, where their troubles were over.

HOSKINS' GUN STOLEN BY BRAZEN CROOK

GRASS VALLEY: Sheriff Richard W. Hoskins yesterday reported that a highly prized revolver, given him by fellow Elks when he was elected to office last November, was stolen from him while he was en route with a prisoner he had picked up in Missouri.

Hoskins stated that he and the prisoner, L. B. Preddy, charged with car theft, stopped in Amarillo, Texas, last Wednesday night. Because there were no garages available in which to leave the car overnight, he locked it and left it outside. During the night a small side window was broken. His revolver and an overcoat were stolen. The sheriff notified the police. The gun is distinctively marked with new grips, which were recently placed on the handle.

WAR VET DIES OF BAD HEART

NEVADA CITY: Dana Edward Dodge, 31, war veteran, and son of a prominent Nevada contractor, was found dead by his companion, Harris R. Touhy of Reno, Nevada, yesterday morning in the car in which the two had gone to sleep some time Thursday night alongside the road on Highway 20, a half mile west of its junction with Highway 40.

Touhy notified passers-by and they in turn notified the sheriff's office and County Coroner Alvah Hooper. The body of Dodge was brought into Grass Valley and Dr. Daniel L. Hirsch performed an autopsy. He found death was due to a muchly dilated heart.

Touhy said the two in Dodge's car were returning from a trip to Chico, Butte county. They left Thursday night at 8 o'clock. Sometime during the night, both being sleepy and tired, they drew to one side of the road for a nap. When Touhy awoke, about seven o'clock, he could not rouse Dodge.

The sheriff's office, the highway patrol, and the coroner, all investigated the circumstances of Dodge's death and concluded it was due to natural causes.

DOE SLAYERS GET 6 MONTHS

GRASS VALLEY: Justice of the Peace Charles A. Morehouse Friday handed Monte Derrett, 34, Dobbins, and Ralph Edalgo, 32, Oregon House, both of Yuba county, the legal limit in the way of penalties for killing three does in Pleasant Valley Wednesday night. Each was fined $500 and sentenced to six months in the county jail.

The two pleaded guilty after Earl Hiscox, game warden; and Percy Watters, deputy sheriff, had signed complaints charging the two with (1) killing deer in closed season, (2) killing female deer, (3) killing deer at night, and (4) killing deer with the aid of artificial light.

JUST WONDERIN'

I Wonder why, at Halloween, when nature's laws all go amiss, my shallow brain does tricks like this.
There was a night that is to be, of which I now shall tell,
I spent it with convivial friends, not wisely but too well.
At three A. M. I ambled home and whisked into the house
And up the swirling attic stairs, adroitly as a mouse.
With bated breath I barred the door, because below
you see,
My wedded wife and ma-in-law were waiting up for me.
I placed my shoes upon a chair, my tux upon the floor,
Then tottered to my attic couch with taut nerves rasped and sore.
"And now" I muttered anxiously and held my addled
head,
"Pink snakes and jade green water dogs will prance
about my bed."
But did they come as they were wont? No, on that night before,
I was beset by monstrous shapes from earth's primordial
shore.
A huge atlantasaurus dashed across the garden wall,
Pursued by tetrabelldons, inordinately tall.
A slinky saurian, yards in length, lay prone upon the floor,
Triceratops in groups of five oozed through my bolted
door.
In desperation, I arose and inadvertently,
Saw mirrored in my cheval glass a rare monstrosity;
An ugly face, prognathous jaw, a mop of coarse red hair
And burning eyes that met my own and gave back stare for stare.
I was not in the least alarmed, I gave no frightened
moan,
For gazing on that virile shape, I knew it for my own.
"Why, I'm a bold Neanderthal!" I cried with heart elate,
"I need not fear my ma-in-law, nor dread my irate mate."
I swaggered down the attic stairs and banged the outer
door,
I lifted up a strident voice in loud and stentorian roar.
"A steed, at once, a worthy steed!" I cried with eyes aflame.
And instantly at my demand, an eohippus came.
I grasped the creature's shaggy mane and sprang upon his back,
Then with a last defiant shout, I took the backward
track.
My little eo made good time, so far he ran and fast
That just before the crack of dawn, I rode into the past!
Its portals clanged behind my back, rude voices called
my name,
Neanderthalers surged about to meet me with acclaim.
They made me king without delay, I took the royal cave,
And for a time in regal might, I ruled both land and wave.
But Fate caught up with me one day, she blocked my royal track—
She placed me on a cosmic ray and now I'm whizzing back.
Back to my erstwhile time and place, back to the scenes
I knew,
And as I swish along the years, my record I review,
For soon, upon a night that was and is again to be,
I'll find my wife and ma-in-law still waiting up for me.

Nutrition Studies Stress Vitamin A

In a recent report on experiments made on rats in connection with vitamin A intake, famed nutritionist Dr. Henry C. Sherman stated that doubling vitamin A intake daily would result in improvements in well-being. The rats used in this experiment showed an increased useful lifespan as a result of the stepped-up vitamin A factor. Yam sweet potatoes are an excellent source of vitamin A, as are liver and leafy green vegetables.

DON'T drive your car if the brakes are faulty. You're not only endangering your own life but also the lives of others.

DON'T drive at night with poor lights. This is the cause of a great many accidents that could easily have been prevented.

DON'T fail to signal for a left or right turn, or when you're stoppign. Get into the habit of doing this . . . it helps other drivers and also pedestrians.

DON'T back into a crowded street without looking both ways. Give the approaching motorist a chance.

DON'T pass a car unless you can see a long, safe distance ahead. HOWEVER ...

DO drive in here for repairs that will make your car safe. Most accidents are caused by cars that are in need of repair. Play safe by driving in today for a thorough check-up.

...This is the report of Drs. ...eane P. Furman and Robert L. ...ainger, University of California ...ollege of Agriculture entomolo-...ists.

...To destroy kissing bugs inside ...omes, they should be sprayed ...ith a standard fly spray or with ...bug bomb, the two scientists ...ay. To prevent them from en-...ering a house, the building ...hould be screened and made in-...ect-proof, they add. The nests of wood-rats, where the bugs usually live, should be cleaned out from around and beneath buildings. There is no specific treatment for the bite of these bugs, Furman and Usinger note, but if symptoms are severe, a doctor should be called.

The brown bugs, about an inch long, are found in California mainly in the foothills up to 4000 feet elevation. Normally their bite goes unnoticed and captive bugs have even fed on humans with no pain or bad after-effects, the two men stated. However, a few persons, extremely sensitive to their bite, may show a severe itching, nausea, hives, or even an abnormally fast heartbeat.

Veterans' News

A steadily increasing number of California veterans are using their G. I. loan guarantee privilege to purchase new homes in preference to old dwellings, veterans administration officials reported today.

Analysis of home loan applications processed by VA during July in the Branch 12 area (California, Arizona, Nevada and Hawaii) revealed that approximately 60 per cent of the loans were for new construction and only 40 per cent for old construction.

This trend is in direct contrast to July, 1946, when a spot check revealed that approximately 65 per cent of G. I. loan applications were for old construction and only 35 per cent for new construction.

The number of new construction loans handled in the six regional VA offices in the Branch 12 area varies considerably, according to Colonel Thomas J. Cross, VA chief here.

New construction loans by regional areas are: San Francisco, 52 per cent; Los Angeles, 63 per cent; San Diego, 76 per cent; Phoenix, Ariz., 84 per cent; Reno, Nev., 61 per cent and Honolulu, 89 per cent.

VA has guaranteed more than 90,500 loans for California veterans, more than any other state in the nation, Cross said. The loans are valued at more than $707,000,000.

The average home loans now being processed by VA in California amounts to approximately $7,701.

The survey revealed that there is no hard and fast rule among California lending institutions in requiring the veterans to make a down payment in connection with his G. I. home loan. However, Cross said, the practices vary widely among lending institutions in various sections of the state.

The survey revealed that lending institutions in the San Francisco area required no down payment in 57 per cent of the cases, in 26 per cent of the cases in the Los Angeles area and less than one per cent of the cases in the San Diego area.

Down payments of $1,000 or less were required in 29 per cent of the cases in San Francisco, 63 per cent in Los Angeles and 84 per cent in San Diego.

Down payments ranging from $1,000 to $3,000 were required in 11 per cent of the cases in San Francisco area, 17 per cent in Los Angeles and 14 per cent in San Diego.

The veteran is a good home loan risk, Colonel Cross pointed out. Out of the more than 90,000 home loans guaranteed by VA in California the veteran has failed to meet his obligations in only 11 cases.

YAM SWEET POTATOES HERE IN NEW CROP

Nature's gold, deep-red and rich, is what's waiting to be built into your meals in the yam sweet potatoes coming in from Louisiana now. These are the kind you can tell by their delicate, rosy skin, their uniform shape, and the true-orange interior color.

Once sweet potatoes were associated with holidays only. Now that they're in steady supply, it's a holiday any day, because sweet potatoes go with so many different kinds of meals. These Louisiana yam "sweets" do their own urging for inclusion in meals because they've sugary-moist texture (never mealy), a down South flavor, and nutrition that convincingly commends them for everyday use. Did you know that a yam sweet potato is at least 60 times richer in vitamin A than an Irish or white potato of comparable size?
